Dear Licensees:

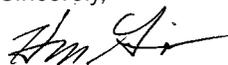

It's time to kick off another football season here in the great State of Alabama. After a 2020 season during which COVID-19 wreaked havoc on college football, everyone could use a bit of a "boost" this fall. The biggest question facing the 2021 college football season is simple: What will that look like? The easy answer at the moment is: We don't know. Vaccines, positivity rates, contract tracing, etc. There's nothing wrong with wishful thinking, but it's also not wise to deny reality.

Another consequence of the global COVID-19 pandemic is a decrease of consumer goods making it to the store shelves. The spirit industry has not been immune. Demand is up and supply is down. While spirits consumers in Alabama may have recently noticed some stores less than fully stocked, the Alabama ABC Board wants you to know the state's liquor inventory is not in danger of running dry. Once we realized our distributors were facing potential issues with production, we turned our full attention to our inventory. The Alabama ABC Board is working with suppliers to keep ABC stores, independent stores, restaurants and bars stocked as quickly as possible. In the event you are out of stock of a certain item, I encourage you to try other brands. ABC stores offer a wide variety of options and price points in all liquor categories to our retail and wholesale customers. We are seeing customers substituting their original choices with other brands.

Supply issues are impacting many areas of the economy, especially the retail sector. This is partly a global supply chain issue. Some brands and distributors are having issues getting glass. Others may have challenges finding caps for the bottles. Domestically we are faced with worker shortages, regional shipping issues and increased demand from restaurants and bars reopening at relatively the same time. This has put a strain on the business. Each liquor category and geographic location has experienced different challenges. For example, the tequila industry faced agricultural issues during the pandemic whereas liquors produced in Europe have experienced issues with shipping channels and ports. The ABC Board is aware of supply chain challenges and is doing all it can to maintain inventory across the state of Alabama.

I would like to thank all our customers, industry representatives and employees for their hard work. We will continue to find ways to enhance service, increase revenues and reevaluate the operation for effective ways to better serve the citizens of Alabama. The Board and I realize that you are indispensable to our success, and we hope that the combination of our services and products are meeting your needs. As always, customer service remains a top priority. Please feel free to contact my office any time you have a question or need assistance.

Sincerely,

H.M. Gipson

BOURBON DONE RIGHT.

There's nothing more American than whiskey bourbon. Dubbed our nation's native spirit by congress in 1964, bourbon symbolizes everything that makes America exceptional. Its story, like those of so many Americans, is one of humble origins. And yet, through hard work and scrappy determination, bourbon has boomed into a billion-dollar industry and massive worldwide job creator.

The exact origin of bourbon is unknown. Legend has it that Baptist Minister Elijah Craig, who established Kentucky's first paper mill, was the first to age in charred oak casks, the process that gives bourbon its signature flavor and hue. Others, however, claim that Jacob Spears from the neighboring Bourbon County was the originator. In all likelihood, bourbon was not the invention of a single man, but rather, a movement that was collectively pulled together in the late 19th century.

Farmers soon found that there was a profit to be made by distilling their excess corn. The whiskey making process had been brought over to the United States by Irish and Scottish immigrants, many of whom made a home for themselves in the southeast. Though the vast majority of bourbon and whiskey was made in the southeast, and particularly in Kentucky, the largest market for bourbon was in the northeast. This meant that Kentucky distillers had to ship their barrels through Louisiana, around Florida and up the east coast. Though lengthy, this journey allowed the barrels to properly age, and once they arrived, bourbon became a huge hit in cities across the north.

Always popular, in recent years the bourbon industry has skyrocketed to become a multi-billion-dollar industry.

It is one of Kentucky's primary industries, raking in $8.6 billion for the state and providing 20,100 jobs with an average salary of $95,000. Tourism is a major part of the bourbon industry, and according to the Kentucky Distillers Association, the Kentucky Bourbon Trail has attracted over 2.5 million visitors over the past five years. Visitors hail from all fifty states and countries across the globe, spending $400-$1,200 per trip on average.

Of course, during the Coronavirus pandemic tourism dropped dramatically. Many distilleries were left fearing for their livelihoods and wondering whether business would ever return to usual. Scrappy as ever, many distillers rose to the occasion by providing virtual tours and creating online communities for their loyal customers. Today, with restrictions lifted, business is already returning to pre-pandemic heights.

"This industry is a testament to the American spirit of making something from nothing, or making something from something leftover," said Damon Thayer, the Kentucky state Senate Majority Leader who hails from Bourbon County. Bourbon's story represents the best that America has to offer: hard work, determination, innovation and, ultimately, success.

All in the Family

TEQUILA

MEZCAL

Consumption of tequila and its smoky, sophisticated cousin mezcal has been steadily rising since 2015. Throughout the pandemic, these agave-based liquors remained popular favorites, with restaurants offering to-go margarita kits and frozen drinks to customers. From 2018 to 2019, tequila jumped 6.6%, and early estimates put it on track for a similar increase in 2020.

While most people are familiar with tequila, in America, mezcal is still working to become a household name. Both liquors are made by distilling the agave plant, though that is where their similarities mostly end. While all tequila is mezcal, not all mezcal is tequila—tequila is to mezcal as scotch is to whiskey. Counterintuitively, the limitations on how and where tequila is made are much tighter than those on mezcal, despite tequila being significantly more available and inexpensive.

One of the biggest differences between the two liquors is the type of agave that they are made from.

Mezcal can be made from over thirty types of agave while tequila can only be made from blue agave. Similarly, mezcal can be made in nine different regions while tequila can be produced in only five regions in Mexico.

The most striking difference between the two is the way in which they are distilled. Tequila is produced by steaming the harvested core of the agave plant (the “piña”) in industrial ovens, then distilling it two to three times in copper pots. Mezcal, which is also made from the piña, is cooked inside earthen pit ovens lined with hot rocks, wood and charcoal which gives it its signature smoky flavor. It is then distilled in clay or copper pots.

Most mezcal production continues to be small scale and artisanal with craftsman using techniques that have been passed down through generations. During the pandemic, when bars and restaurants shut down and the Mexican government tightened restrictions, many of these small-scale producers feared for their livelihoods. American consumer needs persisted, but with strict government regulations and a suddenly non-existent tourist economy, many producers stopped making new mezcal and focused only on selling existing stock. Meanwhile, tequila production remained steady as large-scale producers were better prepared to weather the pandemic.

Despite these setbacks, mezcal producers, like many small business owners, found creative ways to engage their customers. They hosted online tastings via Zoom and continued to educate people about mezcal’s origin and production online. The Mexican government has also committed resources to helping the industry get back on its feet, and many producers now feel that the worst is over. In 2021, there are plans between several producers to build a “mezcal route” to attract tourists and boost the mezcal economy.

Gin Crafts a Comeback

BY MELISSA DOWLING

Note: This excerpt is printed with permission from the Summer 2021 issue of StateWays—the Beverage Alcohol Merchandising Magazine for Control States.

For all the interest in classic and craft cocktails, the gin category did not seem to catch fire with consumers. Total gin volume in the United States was nearly flat in 2019, but that's a slight improvement from 2018 when it fell 1.1 percent.

So what happened in 2020? The overall gin category increased 1.4 percent, according to the Beverage Information Group's 2021 Handbook Advance, reaching 9.99 million 9-liter cases. It's somewhat surprising that gin started to turn around during the pandemic, since many consumers learn about gin cocktails at bars, and the on-premise was shuttered for much of the year. And when people stocked up to stay in during the spring of 2020, they tended to reach for big bottles of popular vodkas, bourbon, and tequila for making Margaritas at home, as well as cases of beer and boxes of wine. It did not seem to be the time to be experimenting with gin.

But consumers may be getting tired of drinking what they always drink and opting for the safe choices. And as more Americans get vaccinated, and guests feel more comfortable venturing out, some beverage professionals expect to see people getting into gin this year.

"Right now I would say that gin is most popular among our 'in the know' cocktail drinkers," says Nicole Lebedevitch, operations partner and beverage director of Forget Me Not, a new Denver-based cocktail bar. "I hope that by the end of 2021, we are crushing through gin."

Forget Me Not, which takes its name and inspiration from the location's former flower shop tenants, currently stocks 18 gins on the back bar. "Our more popular brands are the new American-style gins, Hendrick's in particular," Lebedevitch says. The William Grant & Sons brand, launched in 1999, incorporates distinct botanicals, with flavors of Bulgarian rose and cucumber. "I think our guests like the less-aggressive approach to juniper, but we also see Monkey 47 gaining a ton of popularity," Lebedevitch notes. Monkey 47, acquired by Pernod Ricard last year, is made from 47 botanicals sourced from Germany's Black Forest.

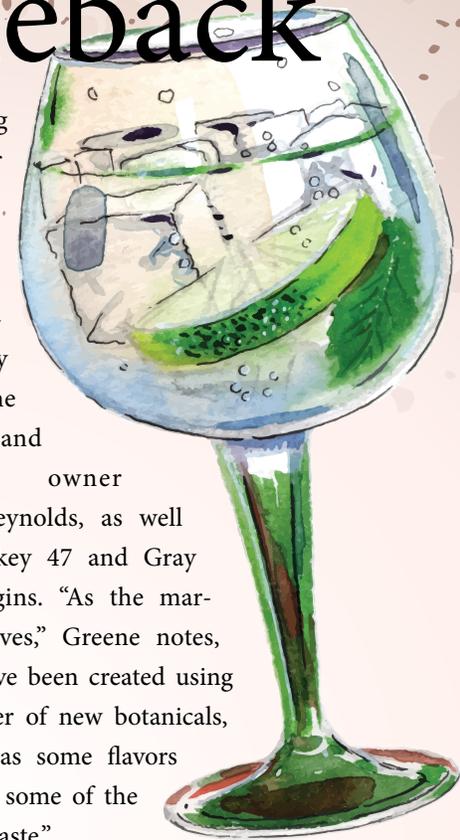

Sear + Sea Bar, the lobby bar at the new JW Marriott Orlando Bonnet Creek in Florida, boasts a portfolio of more than 100 gins displayed on its floor-to-ceiling back bar. "Because gin is still trying to muscle its way into the spirits market with the likes of vodka and bourbons, the mainstay gins are still the most popular," says bartender Thomas Greene. More recently Sear + Sea Bar has been getting calls for Aviation gin, due to its popularity with the actor and brand owner Ryan Reynolds, as well as Monkey 47 and Gray Whale gins. "As the market evolves," Greene notes, "gins have been created using a number of new botanicals, as well as some flavors to mask some of the juniper taste."

COCKTAIL CULTURE

Classic cocktails are by far the most popular go-to for gin drinkers at Forget Me Not, "but I'm always looking to encourage guests to drink a well-made Martini or Gibson," Lebedevitch says. The number-one gin cocktail on the bar's menu is the Nobody's Angel, which uses a local Earl Grey-infused gin from Family Jones, bergamot liqueur, lemon juice, egg white, and elderflower tonic. "It's taking a Gin and Tonic to the next level and bringing texture and depth to the cocktail," Lebedevitch explains.

Guests at Sear + Sea Bar still order some of the classic gin drinks, including the French 75, Ramos Fizz, and Gimlet. The bar has developed several gin-based craft cocktails, including Rosemary Beret made with Hendrick's Gin, torched rosemary, raspberry, lemon, and aquafaba; Key Lime Gimlet, with St. Augustine gin, Mrs. Ginger's local key lime jam, egg white, and lime; and Livin' on a Prairie, with Prairie organic gin, Earl Grey tea, rosemary, and lemon.

DITCHING THE GIN STIGMA

Many consumers seem to have a bias against gin—often due to experimenting with more traditional or lower-end gins in their younger days. What's the best way to help guests get over that?

"I think a lot of people are hesitant from bad experiences when asked if they would like a gin," Greene says. "I've found that if you explain the nuances of the products and what botanicals are present, you can persuade them into trying it again."

The Sear + Sea restaurant has even incorporated gin into some food items. The peppercorns for grating table side are gin soaked and dried before being put into the mills, and the tuna crudo appetizer is infused with gin during preparation.

Lebedevitch believes that the gin stigma is fading, but she also thinks it's about finding a balance, and finding the right type of gin—floral, herbal, juniper-forward, or not. It's also about having the conversation about flavors and textures that guests like, honestly listening to guests, and then gaining their trust in making a balanced cocktail. "And when all else fails, add fresh cucumber," she jokes.
