Dear Licensee:

It is time, once again, for our favorite college teams to kick-off, what promises to be, a super season of football in the great State of Alabama. All over our state season tickets are being purchased, invitations are going out to friends for tailgate parties and alcohol is being bought. Though we may all cheer for different teams, we can all agree to work together to promote drinking alcoholic beverages responsibly. Every member of the "team" from suppliers, brokers, and retailers to ABC employees, plays an important part in the battle against the abuse and misuse of alcohol products. We share the common goal of eliminating under-age drinking and drunk driving.

Just a friendly reminder that license/permit renewals are due by July 31st. If not renewed by September 30th, the licenses/permits will expire. If you have any questions about your renewal, you may contact your division office (<https://alabcboard.gov/licensing-compliance/divisions>) or call our central office at 334-213-6300.

All license and permit holders are reminded to regularly review the laws and rules in Title 28, Code of Alabama, 1975 and ABC Rules and Regulations, which may change from time to time. These are available on our website at www.alabcboard.gov under the "Legal" heading.

Manufacturers are required to obtain a permit from their local health department. This is an existing Health Department requirement, and the permits will be verified when the ABC manufacturing license is issued. If you have not already done so, please submit your food permit to abcboard-enforcement@abc.alabama.gov

In legislative news, Section 28-11-20 Code of Alabama has passed, relating to tobacco; which provides for the suspension or revocation of tobacco permits of tobacco retailers who fail to pay distributors for an invoiced purchase of tobacco, tobacco products, electronic nicotine delivery systems, or alternative nicotine products; and to provide for the reinstatement of tobacco permits in certain circumstances. As required, the Alabama ABC Board has adopted Rule 20-X-28-.01 of the Alabama ABC Board Rules and Regulations, to implement this provision.

ABC offers an online merchant education program and other resources for permittees who sell tobacco, alternative nicotine, and electronic nicotine delivery systems. The Tobacco and Nicotine page has been updated recently and may be found on our website at www.alabcboard.gov under the "licensing and Compliance" heading.

Tequila and Prepared Cocktails continue to drive the largest growth in the state. We have expanded the assortments in these categories to meet the current consumer demands and will continue to do so as products become available. There is still more growth to come from these categories, as we continue to look at more ways of expanding these growing segments of the business.

In a final note, this past Spring, ABC underwent an audit by the State of Alabama Examiners of Public Accounts. The report, which stated there were no significant findings to report, was sent to the Sunset Review Committee of the legislature.

We at the ABC hope everyone has a safe and prosperous summer and fall business season.

Sincerely,

Curtis E. Stewart

RUM EVOLVES WITH THE TIMES

Many factors are in play as rum companies position their products for 2023 and beyond.

Whatever form rum takes nowadays—limited release, RTD, barrel finished, authentic and craft, eco-conscious, or all of the above—the category has plenty of opportunity to lean into current consumer preferences and capitalize.

BY KYLE SWARTZ

Note: This excerpt is printed with permission from the Summer 2023 issue of StateWays—the Beverage Alcohol Merchandising Magazine for Control States.

Consumer trends in the alcohol industry have shifted significantly in recent years, and the rum category has evolved accordingly. The Covid-19 crisis has even more people focused on health and wellness, while the influence of the Millennial and Gen Z generations has only grown. Meanwhile, several trends that had flourished pre-pandemic have picked up steam. Namely: premiumization, barrel finishes, and canned cocktails. Which is all to say that many factors are in play as rum companies position their products for 2023 and beyond.

PREMIUMIZATION REMAINS KEY

Before Covid ever reached our shores and consumers began splurging on their home bars, people had already begun eyeing retailers' top shelves. Nothing here has changed.

"We first launched our premium rum portfolio in 2018, and each year, the consumer appetite for more premium, aged spirits has grown," says Lisa Pfenning, VP Americas, Bacardi Rum Portfolio. "In fact, as a result of the growing consumer interest, we launched our limited-edition Cask Series in 2021. We're seeing the trend of premiumization take off in bars and restaurants as well," she adds, "with 72 percent of bartenders reporting the most premiumization within tequila, followed by single malts, mezcal, and aged rum, mostly driven by the surging popularity of rum-based cocktails."

"Within sipping rums, we're seeing a big lean toward innovative cask finishes," says Antoine Couvreur, Managing Director, Mount Gay. "We've been exploring this with our Master Blender Trudiann Branker has the opportunity to discover and push the boundaries of rum innovation. Most recently she used Madeira wine casks, and this year, she'll release a well-aged rum in a different cask."

Sales, Serralles USA, producer of Don Q rum. “Industry analysts expect as much as 15-percent compound annual growth rates in the super and ultra-premium rum categories,” Meisler says. “Scotch and Bourbon producers . . . have created an audience for unique barrel finishes,” he adds. “These tend to bring new, curious consumers to the brands/categories and allow rum makers to showcase their rums.”

MILLENNIALS AND GEN Z

As younger LDA [Legal Drinking Age] generations increasingly influence the marketplace, savvy brands have picked up on emerging Millennials and Gen Z trends.

“Both generations consume less than the previous Gen X or Boomers. In fact, Gen Z has a reported 15 to 18-percent abstinence rate among its cohort,” says Brian Baker, CMO, Copalli Spirits, which makes Copalli Rum. “The primary reason for not imbibing? They dislike the taste and smell of alcohol. Additionally, unlike previous generations, both Millennials and Gen Z have created a series of hurdles that brands must navigate before they will engage and/or buy,” he adds. “These generations want to know what a company is doing to give back to the world and how they treat their employees. How does my engagement with your brand help the world be a better place? What does your brand do that helps the planet? How truly sustainable and/or net zero is your product—and that doesn’t mean purchasing offsets. For a brand to succeed with these generations, it will need to have built into their DNA the very answers to these questions. And, of course, make a delicious product.”

This can be to rum’s advantage and also detriment. “Millennials and Gen Z consumers seem to be big proponents of authenticity—both in provenance and in craft—and also seem to embrace brand narratives that are more thoughtful in their articulation than similarly positioned brands might’ve been in the past,” says Marc Farrell, Founder of Ten To One Rum. “In many ways, one might argue that much of this is antithetical to the way that rum as a category has been historically represented in the United States, and so I think it requires a continued shift in mindset—and a wave of new creators and thinkers in the category—to help move rum further into the hearts and minds of these emerging consumers.”

Critical in these efforts with younger consumers is when brands effectively communicate what makes their products authentic. “The marketing that has always worked best for us revolves around sharing our passion for Ten To One in as inspired and authentic of a fashion as we possibly can,” Farrell says. “We’re always trying to raise the bar as creative storytellers and champions, not just of rum, but of Caribbean culture as a whole, and I think we’ve always been most successful when we’ve stayed true to those ideals.”

Millennials and Gen Z drinkers also gravitate toward brands with an authentic eco-conscious goal. “We have focused on sustainability, transparency, and quality in how we make rum,” says Baker. “Those are core themes that drive our public relations, social media, and digital outreach—and those pillars are connecting with consumers.”

There are plenty of positive green aspects that the category can communicate with consumers. “Rum is the only spirit that can be made from what’s left over from an industrial process,” says Ed Tiedge, Distiller, Copal Tree Distillery, producer of Copalli Rum. “When you make table sugar, you’re left with molasses. Sugar manufacturing is very efficient, and quality molasses is getting harder to source. The result is that we’re starting to see those distilleries that can source fresh cane juice are using that to make rum. This is moving rum away from an industrial activity and back into an agricultural activity. At the same time, we’re also seeing more emphasis on well-made premium rums.”

Which also speaks to likely the largest problem facing rum: How many consumers actually know any of these things? A lack of knowledge has held back the category from further growth. Some people still think of rum as cheap and sugary, or the comically boozy stuff of pirate adventures. How can the category combat these hurtful misconceptions? Expect more rum brands to tap into the recent explosion in popularity in whiskey and tequila, highlighting how these premium, craft spirits are all made similarly.

“I think continuing to place an emphasis on many of the elements that whiskey consumers are already familiar with will provide a boon for the category,” says Farrell. “Whether it be barrel-aging or unique cask finishes, exposing consumers to the importance of terroir from around the region, or the contrasting styles (and tasting notes) yielded by different distillation methods, there’s so much richness to the rum category that should appeal naturally to that same whiskey consumer. We just have to continue to invest in ensuring that those stories are told.”

CLASSIC COCKTAILS

Another area that has helped fuel rum sales recently is the latest consumer turn toward classic cocktails. “We are seeing significant growth with classic cocktails such as Rum Punch, Espresso Martinis, and Daiquiris,” says Bob Gunter, President and CEO of Koloa Rum Company. “Tiki cocktails are also showing a resurgence in popularity.”

Others have noticed this trend. “Nostalgia—or rather classic references—are an ongoing trend that has been threaded throughout a variety of industries and especially within the spirits space,” says Couvreur. “When it comes to what our consumers are drinking, we anticipate the continued love for classic cocktails to drive growth in 2023. From reinventing tried-and-true drinks, like the Old Fashioned, with unique flavors, or changing one’s perspective on a historic recipe, like the Daiquiri, consumers will be looking for new ways to break outside of the norm, yet still believe in what has passed the test of time.”

A rising interest in classic cocktails is surely helped along by these drinks appearing more frequently in cans. “Today’s consumer doesn’t want to sacrifice taste or quality, and they are seeking ‘better for you’ products. Our canned cocktails fit perfectly with this demographic shift as they are all-natural, lower in alcohol and calories, and they taste delicious,” says Gunter.

Agreeing with him is Pfenning. “According to the International Wines and Spirits Record (IWSR), the spirit-based ready-to-drink category is projected to increase $11.6 billion over the next five years and more than 24-percent volume-wise within that timeframe as well,” she says.

Whatever form rum takes nowadays—limited release, RTD, barrel finished, authentic and craft, eco-conscious, or all of the above—the category has plenty of opportunity to lean into current consumer preferences and capitalize. Whether people respond, and the the category grows, will depend on how well rum brands can communicate their advantages, their similarities, and [their] differences with other Update your knowledge on America's hottest liquor, tequila. Here are some basic questions one might want to be answered. Study hard, there might be a quiz at the end.

WHAT ARE THE REGIONS OF TEQUILA AND HOW DO THEY DIFFER?

It's basically a split between highland (los altos) and lowland (el valle) regions. Highlands tend to be sweeter, while lowlands tend to have a stronger plant influence (earthy, spicy, peppery, vegetal, herbaceous notes).

SCREW TOPS ARE CHEAP CRAP, RIGHT?

There is no difference in using a screw top, fake cork, and real cork (coming from the cork oak) when it comes to spirits.

While a screw top may look cheaper, it eliminates the chance of spoilage, drying out, and crumbling associated with cork. So do screw tops deter you. Many very good and expensive bottles come with screw tops these days, because seriously friends, this isn't wine.

WHAT IS THAT NOM THING I SEE ON THE BOTTLE?

A NOM, or Norma Oficial Mexicana, says that the Tequila you buy is, in fact, the real thing. It means that the liquor has been certified as authentic.

What the NOM tells you is what distillery made the liquor. It will not tell you where the distillery is, where it was aged, or anything about the supplies used in making the liquor, other than that they adhere to standards.

There are more than 1,400 registered brands of tequila on the market but only about 140 licensed tequila distilleries in Mexico. This means that some NOMs, distilleries, are associated with tens, or even hundreds, of tequila brands.

Searching a NOM online will reveal where the tequila was made — and which other tequila brands were also made at that distillery. A relatively common thing is for smaller companies to rent a distillery space to make their own product.

Ignoring the possibility of different ingredients and materials used, I would say that it's not so much the location of the distillery that matters as the process it uses. If for example a distillery extracts the juices by traditional stone wheel crushing, it may be significantly different than if it extracted the juices by hydraulic pressing with steel.

HOW SHOULD I STORE TEQUILA / MEZCAL?

Keep your spirits upright, stored in a cool darkish place (no natural sunlight).

Basements are perfect. Liquor cabinets are fine.

Store a new bottle in an upright position otherwise the high alcohol content can eat through a cork. On the other hand, if it is opened, you should put the bottle on its side once every couple of months for a short while to wet the cork to avoid it getting too dry and crumbling in, which can happen.

If your cork crumbles and gets into the spirit, you will want to get it out immediately. Use a coffee filter or other fine sieve and pour the drink into another clean bottle. Wash the original bottle thoroughly with water and get a new cork or similar.

If you have a nice anejo, you might want to move it to a smaller bottle when only a third or so of the bottle remains, as oxidation does happen a bit and changes the flavor to a degree.

Storing your liquor in the freezer is good for cheap stuff, as colder liquid makes your taste buds less sensitive to the potency of tequila but expensive stuff begs to be tasted at opening.

CORDIALS & LIQUEURS

All the sweetness you need to know for your holiday drinks.

WHAT MAKES A CORDIAL? WHAT MAKES A LIQUEUR? HOW DO YOU USE THEM AND WHY?

A cordial from an historical sense was any invigorating concoction, meant to free the whole body from the malignity of diseases, such as a chartreuse. The monks that made chartreuse originally made a medicinal type of alcohol that would have been much stronger than today's imbibe. Cordials were used to cure illness, settle an uneasy stomach, aid in digestion, and even work as an aphrodisiac. Today cordials and liqueurs are the same thing in that they are composed of spirits and additional flavorings such as sugar, fruits, herbs, and spices. They are generally lower ABV and sweet; sometimes used in place of sugar syrup.

One key and only difference between cordials and liqueurs is a subdivision of 'cordials' that can be non-alcoholic such as lime cordial, a sweet component you might use in a gimlet.

Liqueurs can be directly enjoyed on desserts: ice cream, cheese cake, etc. or it can also be enjoyed on its own post meal, liquid dessert.

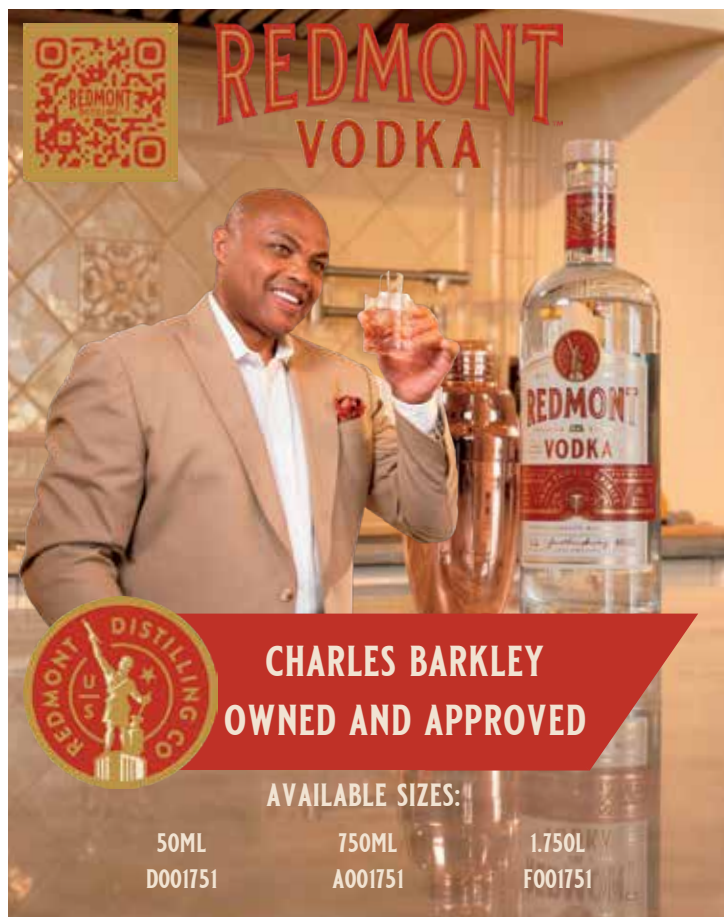

But let us focus on cocktail usage. There are many liqueurs flavor profiles but we will just cover the base layer of flavors:

Chocolate liqueur, mint liqueur, coffee liqueur, herbal liqueur, nutty flavor like amaretto or hazelnut liqueur, citrus flavor like orange liqueur, floral flavor like elderflower liqueur, and fruity flavor like creme de cassis. What are some recipe examples that utilize these flavors?

Replace your sugar syrup with amaretto or elderflower.
